

An energetic optimist and big dreamer, I love to talk, dance, eat great food, and laugh loudly and often.

As a traffic reporter for morning television for 15 years, I delivered the most up to date information to our commuting audience, in the most compelling way possible every day.

Most recently, I worked at WCVB Channel 5 in Boston. In addition to my daily live reports, I also created transportation stories that complemented the station's news reports. During my time at Channel 5, I'm proud that our morning show was consistently the most watched in the market, enjoying record ratings.

Before coming to Boston, I reported at FOX 29 in Philadelphia. While there, in addition to delivering my daily traffic reports and traffic- related stories, I also developed "Firehouse Friday", a weekly series that highlighted everyday heroes in the community, during which I reported live on remote.

Prior to joining FOX 29, I served as traffic reporter for WCAU NBC 10 in Philadelphia.

I'm a Temple University graduate who grew up in Philly after emigrating to the US as a kid.

Still fluent in Polish, one of my hobbies is reading books in my native language. I also love running and working out, and am hoping to one day run the Boston Marathon!
